

GOAL SETTING FACTORS

Goals have inadvertently become a mechanism to police compliance in organizations or bureaucratic exercises based on a fiscal year.

Goals should be tools for growth - to help us stay on track with the objects of our ambition.

Goal development is an exercise in critical thinking where we consider the things that will take us from here to get us from there. A good suite of goals requires deliberation of multiple factors. Initially, one may need to do some deep thinking, feedback-seeking, and insights exploring. After some practice, these things will become part of the flow to grow.
